To whom it may concern:

I have worked with Jonathan Levy (Beezley Management LLC) on several data centers throughout the World and can vouch for their knowledge and experience in this project type. Specifically, these two gentlemen possesses the in-depth knowledge of how data centers work, the major critical support equipment necessary, the interconnections between systems and controls, the commissioning process and the sensitive handoff from construction to operations that ensures a smooth transition for a 24/7 mission critical facility.

Beezley has managed the design, permitting, construction, and commissioning processes for data centers. Their management experience also includes design reviews, constructability reviews, QA/QC oversight, the zero punchlist process, continuous improvement programs, modular construction techniques to save on field construction labor, and effective management progress reporting.

Most notably, the Beezley Team are also effective facilitators, leaders and mediators – skills that are essential to completing complex, high profile projects these days.

Please do not hesitate to contact me if you require additional information.
